Diversity is much more than affirmative action though. So as long as we clearly define what we mean by it, I feel confident. We stripping affirmative action upthrows all of our practices, I have to wonder if we were doing it correctly to begin as well. This is an opportunity for us to restructure how we approach diversity.

Me either and I am not afraid to have a target on my back for something I so strongly believe is necessary. Keep me posted,

Hello there

No they have not. I can pose this to VP Poore and see what she thinks. I do not have a strong opinion either way as long as the work gets done.

In our last Executive Committee meeting, one of our chairs was concerned about using “ DEI” for our initiatives because of the Legislative tension. He feels it puts a target on us. It was suggested that perhaps we change our committee to the Inclusivity Committee with the same goals and actions. Has any other committee raised this concern?
